EUROPEAN MASTER IN PROJECT MANAGEMENT – EUROMPM – GENERAL MANAGEMENT 3 OR 4 SEMESTER CONTENT AND STRUCTURE

Degree Program Profile

The degree program is a consecutive application-oriented degree program. Accordingly, admission requires a first graduate degree imparting professional skills (bachelor's degree or (German) Diplom). The criteria for an application-oriented degree program are met both with regard to content and by the lecturers' quality as these have experience in the job-specific application of academic findings in addition to their academic qualification.

The relevant profile elements are:

- focus on the application area project management
- investigation and development of project management as an academic field
- communication of the interdisciplinary and cross-domain character of project management through the selection of modules and specializations and by integrating several disciplines in Dortmund and at partner institutions.
- the international focus with the integration in a network of renowned European universities
- the high share of practical and project-related work in the curriculum, both by the elements of the course modules throughout the semester and by the independent work dominating the third and fourth semesters; this profile element is reinforced by the cooperation of lecturers from the industry with long-term associations with the University of Applied Sciences and Arts
- consolidation of the academic element by integration in F&E activities of the universities via the project thesis and the specialization
- the 4-semester Master's program EuroMPM-IT-4semesters also offered by the University of Applied Sciences and Arts is complemented by the IT and technology oriented profile element

The program qualifies for senior managerial work in projects in companies, associations or authorities

Completing the degree program European Master in Project Management – EuroMPM leads to a highly qualifying degree, both academically and professionally. It prepares for senior managerial work in projects in companies, associations or authorities and teaches students the required skills, abilities and methods. In order to meet the demands and changes of the professional world, teaching of the contents of the individual modules is application-oriented and based on academic findings. Students are thus enabled to analyze processes and problems encountered in practice and to work out appropriate professional solutions while taking into account the context of other fields.

In addition to the acquisition of subject-specific and methodological competences, the students' personal and social skills are to be developed. Students acquire professional skills and are capable to take responsible action. International competences can be improved by studying at one of the foreign universities involved for a minimum of one semester.

The contents of the program take into account the profiles of requirements of the international associations for project management (PMI®, IPMA®, GPM). The international focus is provided by English being used as the language of instruction and also by the possibility to study abroad. The standard period of study including all examinations is three semesters or, if studies are extended by a semester abroad, four semesters.

The Master Euro MPM thus leads to 120 ECTS for the four-semester program and to 90 ECTS for the three-semester program.

The degree program was developed by representatives of various European Universities and is offered at the following universities in parallel:

- Norwegian University of Science and Technology – NTNU – in Trondheim, Norway
- University of the Basque Country in Bilbao, Spain
- University of Applied Sciences and Arts in Dortmund, Germany
- National University of Construction and Architecture in Kiev, Ukraine
- Ternopil National Economic University in Ternopil, Ukraine
- Kaunas Technological University in Kaunas, Lithuania

If the master's examination has been passed, the University of Applied Sciences and Arts Dortmund awards the degree of Master of Arts (MA).
